Tokakuji temple

Tradition says that if you place a piece of red paper on the Red Paper Nio in front of the gate, in the location at which you have a physical ailment, you will get better. The stone statues, completely covered in red, create a unique piece of scenery.

Kyu Furukawa Gardens

A garden representative of the early Taisho period, boasting a total area of 30,000 m<sup>2</sup>. Visitors can enjoy beautiful views, particularly azaleas beginning in mid-April, roses beginning in mid-May and mid-October, and crimson foliage beginning in late November.

Nishigahara Ichirizuka

An ichirizuka is a mound ( "tsuka" ) built on both sides of the road from Nihonbashi every one ri ( "ichiri" ; approximately 3.9 km), with Japanese hackberry trees planted on top. This ichirizuka has been designated as one of Japan's historic sites.

Asukayama Park

Yoshimune Tokugawa, the eighth Tokugawa shogun, planted cherry trees here, and it was opened to commoners as a popular spot for viewing cherry blossoms. In addition to cherry blossoms, there are hydrangeas, azaleas, and much more greenery in the park. The "three museums of Asukayama" are also here.
